

Lottie Vidor for JewishCare

In my opinion JewishCare is one of the most important organisations in our community.

When my parents, who were financially independent and lived in their own home, started to feel isolated from the world at large, we turned to JewishCare.

Their friends had passed on and they no longer had a support group with whom they could meet and socialise.

In addition to assisting with professional carers and home support, JewishCare provided the opportunity for socialisation allowing them to meet other people of similar background and interests. Without this their lives would have been very isolated.

It was only then that I came to the realisation that one day, in the distant future, I may also be the recipient of JewishCare's services. Support of JewishCare is vital and can be considered insurance for what may come.
