

Monica Saunders-Weinberg for JewishCare

I feel very blessed to have been raised in our strong, nurturing Jewish community and whilst one can be forgiven for thinking that life is full of many blessings, the reality is that this is far from normal for many people close to us.

Being a descendant of a Holocaust surviving parent and grandparents, having a sibling with a mental disability and having experienced the loss of family members from severe illnesses - both physical and mental, I have seen firsthand what life can throw your way and the importance of love and support. JewishCare provides this for our community members every day.

I have had my eyes opened and my heart broken and warmed so many times over seeing and hearing the troubled cases our community is faced with. I am aware that hardship, neglect, abuse and illness are all real issues which JewishCare faces daily and responds to.

I know that life doesn't always turn out the way you may have hoped and I feel privileged and honoured to be able to give back and to touch the lives of people less fortunate, when and wherever possible.
